Stuph & Thangs

POWER OF THE PURSE CAN SOLVE PROBLEMS...

MOVING? Please use form inside paper and give full information. Mailing list is run on Friday for following week.

In recent days there has been quite a flap going on in Texas since a Federal judge ruled the T&V Cunnery were entitled to film the next electrocution at the State Prison. Atty. Gen. Hill has announced he will try to get this ruling overturned and it appears we are in for another very long and equally silly battle to try and get the Courts to solve our personal likes or dislikes.

So far only a couple of T&V Stations have indicated an interest in broadcasting this grotesque spectacle into whatever livin' rooms might be interested in watching the criminal pay the supreme penalty. Some of the more inventive folks have suggested that if and when this Big Show hits the tube it be balanced by showing the police pictures of the victims which caused the whole thing to take place. Good idea!

Cash Receipts Above Year Ago

Cash receipts from farm marketings for January - September totaled $65.96 billion, up 9 1/2 pct. from a year earlier, according to USDA's Economic Research Service. Receipts from livestock and products, at $35.33 billion, up 14 pct. from the 1976 pact. Receipts from crops, at $30.6 billion, up 2 pct.

A breakdown shows receipts from livestock and livestock products were above a year earlier in all 50 States. Receipts from crops above a year ago in 25 states, below a year ago in 25. Over-all receipts above a year ago in 45 states. They were below a year earlier in Rhode Island, North Dakota, Ohio, Alaska and Hawaii. (Agricultural Outlook for December).

Dairying Receipts Up Sharply

Cash receipts from dairying seen at $11.5 billion for 1976. That's up 18 pct. from the $9.9 billion total for a year ago and record high. Milk production for all of 1976 expected to hit close to 120 billion lbs. If it does reach that total, it'll be the highest annual output since 1965. Milk output seen up slightly next year, though feed costs will be higher. Soybean meal costs seen up sharply, hay prices are expected to remain well above year earlier levels. (Summary of the Dairy Situation).

Smaller Winter Wheat Crop Seen

Winter wheat acreage seeded in the fall of 1976 for harvest in 1977 totaled 55.8 million acres, 3% less than last year. This halts the trend of steadily increasing acreage that prevailed over the past 5 years. Production of the 1977 winter wheat crop, based on December 1 conditions, is forecast at 1.438 million bushels, 8% below the 1976 crop.

J. T. Pinkerton, Tyler, with some of his Angus cattle, along with sunshine and rain, rose bushes and pine trees — things that make life happy for him in East Texas. "I believe Angus people are ready to 'cash in' on the advantages their cattle have proven to possess," he said.

presented to a breed of beef cattle, he said.
He noted that Angus cattle have successfully withstood the trials of "modernizing" from short, dumpy animals in demand a decade or two ago to the stretchy, big boned, high producing animals now typical of the breed; and they have successfully "weathered the Exotic storm" and are still going strong.

"One of the things the Angus breed can capitalize on right now is their crossbreeding abilities — nearly every 'Exotic' steer that has won a livestock championship in the past few years was really half Angus on the dam's side — that's a thing Angus breeders can use to their advantage," Pinkerton said.

A typical J. T. Pinkerton Angus cow.

He bought a 100-acre farm near Tyler, went into the commercial cattle business, then in 1968 he started looking for a registered breed of cattle to get into. "I was looking for an animal that was highly fertile, would breed at an early age, had good mothering and milking ability to raise a good, big calf, and ones that would produce a beef animal that would grade choice at an early age and could impart these characteristics to her offspring — Angus were the ones which appeared to most nearly provide all these desirable characteristics," he said.

Pinkerton went to a dispersal sale where he hoped to buy a "gopher" machine, and ended up buying 16 black cows. Then he went to the Biffle Ranch in Oklahoma, which was being heavily culled at the time, and bought more Angus, this time Emulous Angus, including one that was later the dam of the reserve grand champion at the Denver National Livestock Show in 1972.

The only bull Pinkerton ever bought was a son of Emulous Bob of C. Pride. With 49 Emulous cows, Pinkerton has used an "inbreeding" program along with deep culling to build his herd up to one of the best small herds in the nation.

One of his young bulls, Pinkerton's Emulous A 181, was entered in the National Sire Evaluation program by a good friend of Pinkerton's, Robert R. Petty Jr., Nolan, Texas, and was the number one bull in the national carcass quality evaluation summary. That bull was purchased by Curtiss Breeding Co., and has done a real good job for them. Another bull Pinkerton raised, Pinkerton's Emulous B-225, a double bred Emulous on both top and bottom of his pedigree, gained 4.88 pounds per day on an official 140-day feed test and weighed 1,240 pounds at 365 days of age. That bull is now on lease to Curtiss.

The number one gaining calf at the Texas Angus Assn.'s Performance Test Station at Era, Texas, now, is a son of "225" and a related dam, Pinkerton said.

Pinkerton said another thing he likes about the Angus cattle is their longevity and productivity. One of the original Biffle cows Pinkerton bought had to be sent to market when she was 26 years old and had raised 23 or 24 calves.

Pinkerton believes that Angus breeders have all the tools necessary to keep Angus cattle abreast of changing ideas about size, bone, conformation, type of meat, the National Sire Evaluation Program, Scan-O-Gram and X-40 testing, rigid culling, and attention to nutritional development.

"With Angus we can produce the kind of cattle the consumer demands, mostly on grass or forage and with a minimum amount of feed," Pinkerton said.

"Angus have weathered the storms, they have come back strong."

AMERICAN RED BRANGUS ASSOCIATION NEWS

Dan Hollis, Red Brangus Breeder, Banker Helping ET Cattle Business

Henderson, Texas — Dan Hollis heads up a "family" cattle ranching organization that extends far beyond the members of his immediate family — through his leadership as president of the First National Bank of Henderson, the "family" of cattle ranchers, includes more than 60 other residents of Rusk County who've found a way to add about $50 a head to the heifer calves they market.

Hollis, a Red Brangus breeder, extends credit to his bank's cattleman customers so that they can retain ownership of their heifers beyond the weaning time, and through a feedlot period.

"For the past several years, our customers have marketed their steers when weaned at around 425-550 pounds and have been able to get around 87 1/2 cents per pound for them — but prices for heifers at the same time would have been about $10 to $12.50 cwt. loss. By retaining ownership, and putting the heifers in commercial feedlots until they are fat enough to grade good and choice the cost of gain usually runs about 37 1/2 cents per pound, but packers have been paying around 37 1/2 cents per pound for the fat heifers, thus the owner realizes that price for them, including the first 400 or so pounds they weighed when weaned. The owner gets around $50 a head more for them — and that's the difference between a profit and a loss," Hollis says.

This practice has been followed several years under Hollis' direction, and only a very few pens of the heifers have shown a loss in the feedlot, then only minimal losses. Last year, of more than 80 pens of heifers fed out that way, only six pens lost money in the feeding process, Hollis said.

The feeding technique, coupled with the added weight at weaning that Hollis has been able to help his customers put on their calves by use of Red Brangus bulls, has been a significant factor in the success of the cattle raising business in Rusk County in recent years.

Not only does Hollis raise all of the Red Brangus bulls his herd of Red Brangus cows, plus his "keeping" heifers will produce each year, but he goes to other Red Brangus breeders and buys bulls and brings them to Rusk County for his customers. "We usually sell more than 100 Red Brangus bulls a year here, and that doesn't start to fill the local demand," he said.

Hollis and some of his Red Brangus friends in Rusk County once put 25 Red Brangus bulls in a gain test at Kilgore College where they had an overall average daily gain of more than three pounds, and three of them topped that particular test at gains of 3.91, 3.93 and 3.96 pounds per day.

Associated in the cattle business with Hollis are his children, Danny, 21, the oldest, who works for a fertilizer blending plant and helps with the cattle; Phillip, 19, who goes to Kilgore College and works with the cattle after getting out of class at 2 p.m. each day; David, 18, who is a senior in Henderson High School and assists with the cattle after school and non-commercial cows in his Rusk County pastures.

Hollis has been president of the First National Bank for nine years during which it has grown from assets of around $7 million, to more than $10 million. "Our agricultural and cattle customers have accounted for a significant part of that growth," Hollis says.

"Rusk County is the heart of the East Texas cow-calf country, and we have found that the hybrid vigor, good milking ability, and efficient gaining calves produced by crossing Red Brangus bulls on Red Texas crossbred cows is giving us the kind of calves feedlot operators like and produce the kind of meat that's good demand by supermarkets and housewives," Hollis concluded.

TEXAS RED ANGUS NEWS

Production Research Plays Big Role in Beef Market Development Plan

Ed. note: Fourth in a series, this feature on the proposed beef market development plan focuses on production research — and how a stepped up program can help you reduce costs and increase profit.

As a cattle producer, you're caught between a rock and a hard place — high-priced grain and low-priced cattle.

And there isn't a lot that you, as an individual, can do to remedy the situation . . . now.

But there will be if the national beef market development referendum passes next spring. You'll start investing 0.3 percent of your sales in a coordinated self-help program on a national scale: advertising, merchandising, marketing, distribution, and foreign market development — all aimed at helping you, the individual cattle producer.

Production research is high on the list of priorities.

"Research is the first step toward a successful cattle industry recovery," says L. S. Pope, dean of agriculture, New Mexico State University. "Cattlemen must find ways to improve production efficiency, lower costs and improve their product."

Dr. Pope is the author of a paper entitled, "Opportunities for Production Research to Benefit the Beef Industry."

It was commissioned by the Beef Development Taskforce (BDT), a national organization of cattlemen whose goal it is to establish the beef market development program.

"For those who might question the value of research to the beef cattle industry, I refer them to their own feedyards, and pastures," Pope said. "Nearly all the modern techniques used in beef cattle breeding and improvement stem from research and that includes balanced rations, improved pastures, vaccines and antibiotics, and the improvement in meat quality."

He stressed that there are still lots of problems to be solved and outlines some of the potential.

Reproductive rates. With reproductive rates standing at about 87% nationally there is substantial room for improvement, Pope says. There are currently about 46 million beef cows in U.S. herds. A calving improvement of just 2% would increase our output by 900,000 calves per year. That's about as many calves as are produced in California each year. This would add about 180 million pounds of beef at weaning time alone and boost producers' incomes by $112 million annually.

Weaning weights. Output per cow unit can be increased through better bull and female selection. Improved pastures, new kinds of forages and better nutrition could easily add 20 pounds or 6% to the weaning weight of calves. This would create nearly 600 million more pounds of sale weight from the nation's cow herds.

Calf death loss. A one percent reduction in calf death loss during weaning and shipment would save the industry about $8 million each year.

Feed additives. Researchers can develop new and safer feed additives. A 2% increase in feed conversion efficiency would save U.S. feeders the bill on 600,000 tons of grain each year.

Cutability. Scientists can find ways to improve the lean cut-out of the beef carcass. An increase of 0.5% on half the cattle finished in the U.S. each year — 13 million head — would yield enough extra lean beef to supply the annual requirements of 330,000 Americans.

"While these statistics are submitted in the spirit of 'guesstimate' since the numbers are constantly changing, they do give some idea of the potential for improvement . . . and increased profit for the cattle producer," Pope said.

Some other potential research areas Pope mentioned were evaluating new breeds and crosses, improving the ability of beef cattle to use low quality roughages, developing a 'systems' approach to maximum beef production and developing improved marketing systems that give cattle producers a decision-making role and better control of their product all the way to the consumer.

Research on some of the topics Pope mentioned is already underway, but inflation has cut heavily into scientific budgets, and consequently results.

While research costs vary, most authorities agree that it takes at least $50,000 per scientific man year to launch a productive research program.

Based on the scientific man years needed to effectively conduct research that would have an impact on the industry state and federal agencies and private companies should be putting $20 million more each year into increased effort.

Good research is not an 'on-again, off-again' affair, Pope said. Beef cattle producers need to unite to sponsor research in those areas of beef production with the best probability of payoff.

Despite the current price picture, all signs point to a strong beef demand through the rest of this century," Pope said. "Some experts predict consumption will continue to rise by two to three pounds per capita per year. And the outlook for profit from beef cattle is good — perhaps better than for any other part of the U.S. food industry. But to stay in business now, beef cattle producers need to continually look for new ways to produce beef more efficiently."

Next issue: Nutrition, new product research.

Politicians: Those people who button, slickers and lady shakes who suddenly start making your name.

This T&V operator works for the Public Television Station in Dallas. Of course, the simple answer is for the viewer to simply tune out this or any other offending program. However, since Public Television Stations are financed by Govt. funds in part and mostly by grants or gifts from business and the public and these broadcasters at regular intervals go on the air and beg for money, this is a good way to put a stop to such stunts.

Your Congressman and Senators can cut off the Federal Money, if you put it on them. The sponsors among business and foundations can shut off their wallet, if you put it on them. Certainly there is a place in our Grate Society for Public Television. It comes up with some great shows, as well as some of the less than great stunts put on by pressure groups of one kind or another through news and other kinds of comment shows, etc.

Another angle, which has been explored, would be to stage the auction in a public place like the Cotton Bowl and sell tickets to morbid folks who get their kicks from watching this kind of stunts. It might raise some badly needed money for programs aimed at keeping kids from a life of crime and the price should add up to a very wholesome take.

Somewhere down the line Public Television got off the track when it started to become the voice of minorities, consumerists, bleeding hearts and various other small groups of people with axes to grind. It was supposed to be educational and entertaining to begin with, not a tool for malcontents to use in their fight against the Establishment.

In my office there are two aerosol cans, given me in just after I had announced the desire to own a polygraph machine which I would strap on certain citizens who are careless with their backs before I would talk to 'em. One of these cans is labelled Smart Arse Cure and the other is called B.S. Repellent. One thing is certain sure, if that T&V guy ever shows up, I'll unload the Smart Arse can on him.

Ever thine,
The Editor.

P.S.: Uncle Dunk notes where Jimmy Carter is toying with a Hot Line Phone on which you & me can register our belly akes to the Commander in Chief. We don't expect this will take place. Once he gets settled in office he want need to hear any additional belly ake. Dunk says an equally far out idea is the suggestion of the Advisory Committee on the National Growth Process that organized belly akes be financed with Federal Funds. Dunk says if this comes to pass he aims to organize several outfits and get in on it. It'd be the first real chance you & me has to dip into the public till like the politicians do. — Thassall, Brothers!

Stuph & Thangs

This would certainly put more balance in such a program and while the motives of the broadcaster remain fairly obscure, a good guess would be that it is a ploy to further the campaign to eliminate the death penalty. It is certain the show would attract a large audience, in the old days when public executions were the custom there was always a standing room only crowd. The broadcaster, as is usually the case, says to deny them television rights to an execution would violate the First Amendment rights of the news media and the public's right to know. So much for Poppycock.

This T&V operator works for the Public Television Station in Dallas. Of course, the simple answer is for the viewer to simply tune out this or any other offending program. However, since Public Television Stations are financed by Govt. funds in part and mostly by grants or gifts from business and the public and these broadcasters at regular intervals go on the air and beg for money, this is a good way to put a stop to such stunts.

Your Congressman and Senators can cut off the Federal Money, if you put it on them. The sponsors among business and foundations can shut off their wallet, if you put it on them. Certainly there is a place in our Grate Society for Public Television. It comes up with some great shows, as well as some of the less than great stunts put on by pressure groups of one kind or another through news and other kinds of comment shows, etc.

Another angle, which has been explored, would be to stage the auction in a public place like the Cotton Bowl and sell tickets to morbid folks who get their kicks from watching this kind of stunts. It might raise some badly needed money for programs aimed at keeping kids from a life of crime and the price should add up to a very wholesome take.

Somewhere down the line Public Television got off the track when it started to become the voice of minorities, consumerists, bleeding hearts and various other small groups of people with axes to grind. It was supposed to be educational and entertaining to begin with, not a tool for malcontents to use in their fight against the Establishment.

In my office there are two aerosol cans, given me in just after I had announced the desire to own a polygraph machine which I would strap on certain citizens who are careless with their backs before I would talk to 'em. One of these cans is labelled Smart Arse Cure and the other is called B.S. Repellent. One thing is certain sure, if that T&V guy ever shows up, I'll unload the Smart Arse can on him.

Ever thine,
The Editor.

P.S.: Uncle Dunk notes where Jimmy Carter is toying with a Hot Line Phone on which you & me can register our belly akes to the Commander in Chief. We don't expect this will take place. Once he gets settled in office he want need to hear any additional belly ake. Dunk says an equally far out idea is the suggestion of the Advisory Committee on the National Growth Process that organized belly akes be financed with Federal Funds. Dunk says if this comes to pass he aims to organize several outfits and get in on it. It'd be the first real chance you & me has to dip into the public till like the politicians do. — Thassall, Brothers!
